Newsletter Summaries

Bradford Tax Institute

“Could Twitchco Save Your ERC Refund from Tax?” — This article lays out a legal argument for challenging the IRS's default position that Employee Retention Credit (ERC) refunds must simply be reported as taxable income in the year received. It points to a federal court case from over 50 years ago, Twitchco, as a potential legal foundation for a stronger ERC protective refund claim, and notes that the timing of when a firm filed its Forms 941-X (and its income tax return) can affect how strong that position is. The suggested approach for most taxpayers is not to simply ignore the IRS: report the ERC refund as income, pay the tax, then file a protective refund claim citing Twitchco to preserve the right to a refund if courts eventually reject the IRS's position.

“Bonus: Tax Tips to Share” — A monthly subscriber bonus from publisher W. Murray Bradford: a condensed, shareable version of this month's Tax-Saving Tips newsletter (formatted and unformatted versions), intended for forwarding to clients or posting on a firm website. The email itself is just delivery links to that document rather than tax content in the body.

Checkpoint/Thomson Reuters, Accounting Today, and CPA Trendlines: no new newsletter emails from these sources in the last 24 hours.

Other Important Emails

Thomson Reuters – account check-in

Daniel Vasquez (TR rep) confirmed a 30-minute Teams call for Monday at 1:00 PM ET to review how your Thomson Reuters tax products are performing post busy-season.

Microsoft 365 invoice available

Your Microsoft 365 Business Standard invoice is ready to view in the admin center (dennis@modrakcpa.com).

Possible spam/phishing – “speechify annual invoice”

An email to dennis@modrakcpa.com from dennismodrak@icloud.com has a raw Stripe file URL as its subject line, which is a common phishing pattern. Recommend deleting without clicking any links unless you sent this yourself.

All newsletters, promotions, and automated notices (golf, retail, general news digests, IRS product-update digests, etc.) were skipped as instructed.

Tasks

No Todoist connector is currently available in this workspace, so tasks could not be pulled automatically. (A Todoist reminder email did surface a task, "Get a room in Orlando," due today — connect Todoist for a full overdue/due-today list going forward.)
