Newsletter Summaries

Bradford Tax Institute — "Could Twitchco Save Your ERC Refund from Tax?"

If you received (or expect) an ERC refund, the IRS's position is that it must be reported as income in the year received. This piece argues there may be a legitimate legal counter-argument, built around Twitchco, a federal court case more than 50 years old, which could give a protective refund claim real teeth. Two practical points stand out: the timing of when the Forms 941-X were filed — and even when the income tax return was filed — can materially affect how strong the position is. The suggested approach for most taxpayers is not to simply ignore the IRS: report the ERC refund as income, pay the tax, then file a protective refund claim citing Twitchco as the legal theory, preserving the right to recover the tax if courts eventually side against the IRS. The article is careful to flag this as an evolving area of law — opportunity and risk both, without overstating either.

Bradford Tax Institute — "Bonus: Tax Tips to Share"

A separate, purely administrative email: a monthly "member bonus" pointing to a condensed, client-ready version of this month's Tax-Saving Tips newsletter (formatted and unformatted versions, plus instructions for adding your own firm logo). No new tax content beyond what's summarized above — it's a distribution/marketing tool for sending to clients or using on the firm website.

Checkpoint / Thomson Reuters, Accounting Today, CPA Trendlines

No unread emails from these three sources in the last 24–48 hours — nothing to summarize today.

Other Important Emails

Nothing else in the inbox in the last 24 hours needed attention. The remaining unread mail was all newsletters/promotions (golf retailer, back-to-school deals, an MLB digest, a Marriott Vacation Club offer, and an Apple receipt for the Todoist Pro renewal) and was skipped per the usual filter.

Tasks

Todoist isn't connected in this session, so overdue/due-today tasks couldn't be pulled. Connect the Todoist integration to have this section populated automatically.
